

In 2013, Ashlee Wells Jackson turned personal tragedy into a worldwide movement promoting body acceptance and open dialogue about the pregnancy and postpartum issues women face. In The 4th Trimester Bodies Project, she has compiled photographs of women after they've delivered their babies and shares their personal stories. The images are meant to shed light on the true beauty of a woman's body, celebrate differences, and acknowledge the physical and emotional impacts of childbearing on a woman's life.
